The global men's personal care market has shown a continuous growth trend, with skincare products dominating the market and possessing market potential. We are trying to introduce a new skincare packaging to solve the men's skincare cumbersome as well as to promote men's skincare education.

01 Market Insight

Data shows that blackheads, oil and other problems are common skin problems for men, and most existing products in the market use traditional packaging and lack of innovation. The ball + vacuum bottle design accurately addresses this need, providing a hygienic and convenient use experience, while enhancing user trust through precise dosage control. This innovative design not only meets men's preference for efficient skincare but also establishes a differentiating advantage in a competitive market.

04 Core Ideology

- Providing men with efficient, convenient and precise skincare solutions, it breaks the complexity and inconvenience of traditional skincare and makes skincare an easy experience in daily life. This concept is realized through the roller ball design and the vacuum graduated bottle end. The roller ball avoids hand contact and simplifies skincare steps, while the vacuum bottle accurately controls the dosage and avoids waste, which perfectly fits men's pursuit of an efficient and simple lifestyle. At the same time, the product provides professional and effective cleansing solutions for men's common blackhead problems, meeting their needs for targeted skincare.

0 Customer Portrait

2 GEN Z: Seeking convenience and instant results, highly influenced by social media, preferring innovative designs and cost-effective products.

MILLENNIALS: Focusing on efficacy and quality, pursuing efficient and multi-functional solutions, and willing to pay for high-end products.

GEN X: Concerned about anti-aging and safety, preferring classic brands and simple designs, and needing more education and guidance.

0 Market Pain Spot

3 The main pain points in the male skincare market center on convenience, design fit and precision. Many male consumers find traditional skincare procedures cumbersome and not in line with their efficient lifestyles, and product designs are often feminine, lacking optimization for male aesthetics and usage habits. In addition, the lack of precise dosage control leads to waste or poor results, and there is a lack of innovative solutions to common male skin problems such as blackheads and oil. Some men are not aware of the importance of skincare or are confused about how to use the products correctly, while traditional skincare products tend to stain the hands during use, affecting the experience.

Roller ball + vacuum bottle design accurately solves the pain points of the male skin care market: the roller ball simplifies the steps, avoiding hand contact and enhancing convenience and hygiene experience; the vacuum graduated bottle end precisely controls the amount of dosage, avoiding waste; the simple and technological sense of packaging suits the male aesthetics; the roller ball evenly spreads the serum, targeting to solve the problem of blackheads. These designs directly respond to market demand and attract more male consumers.

The core concept of the product is also reflected in the deep understanding of men's aesthetics and usage habits. The simple, technology-rich packaging design fits men's preferences and conveys an efficient and professional brand image. By addressing the pain points of the male skincare market, your products not only enhance the experience of using them, but also help male consumers integrate skincare into their daily lives, making it an easy and natural habit.

01 Rotary tail with scale

This swivel tail design with a graduated scale is conducive to allowing men to be more precise with the number of milliliters per use. Most of the skincare products that exist today are not male friendly because the instructions do not tell the male user exactly how much to use, which is why many men who want to take care of their skincare products do not do so. This design is more favorable to male users to control their skincare products.

02 Ball Design

The roller ball design offers multiple advantages in addition to preventing your hands from getting sticky from skincare products. Firstly, the roller ball can apply the serum evenly, avoiding the problem of uneven dosage when applying manually, and at the same time, it promotes the absorption of the skin through rolling massage to enhance the effect of the product. Secondly, the rolling action of the roller ball can gently massage the skin and stimulate facial blood circulation, helping to improve the skin condition. It is especially suitable for use around the eyes or in areas prone to fatigue, relieving puffiness and fatigue. In addition, the roller ball design avoids direct hand contact with skincare products, reducing the risk of bacterial contamination and keeping the product hygienic, which is especially suitable for consumers with sensitive skin or those who pay attention to hygiene. The roller ball can also be precisely targeted to specific problem areas such as blackheads and enlarged pores, helping the serum to penetrate better and enhancing the effect of localized care. Its compact and portable design is suitable for on-the-go use, whether in the office, at the gym, or while traveling, it can be used quickly to meet the needs of modern men's fast-paced lives. Finally, the roller ball is fun and innovative to use, which can attract consumers to try it out, while increasing the pleasure of skincare through a comfortable rolling experience, helping to develop a skincare habit.

The product will be marketed in two main ways, online and offline, and financial projections for the next five years have been introduced, using forecasts with an attenuation period for feasibility.

01 Social Media

On social media platforms, short videos can be produced through tiktok and ins to show the convenient way of using the product and the effect against blackheads, while cooperating with KOLs in the field of male skincare for evaluation and recommendation to attract young male consumers. Post graphic notes on LittleRedBook to share the usage experience and effect comparison charts, highlighting the innovation and practicality of the product in combination with male skincare pain points. In addition, we use WeChat advertising to target male users aged 18–40, emphasizing the convenience and functionality of the product, increasing brand exposure and user engagement.

0 Market Strategies

The online marketing strategy includes cooperation with male skincare KOLs, posting reviews and grass-raising content on platforms such as Tiktok and LittleRedBook, highlighting the convenience of the roller ball design and the blackhead cleaning effect. Optimize product detail pages on e-commerce platforms such as Tmall and JD, combining short videos and promotions to boost conversion rates. Demonstrate product usage and answer consumers' questions through live banding. Place precise ads on WeChat, targeting male users aged 18–40, and directing them to e-commerce for purchase. Encourage users to share their experience, provide coupons or small sample rewards, and form word-of-mouth communication.

The offline marketing strategy includes stocking the products in Watsons drugstore chains, setting up trial packs and boosting exposure through shopper recommendations. Collaborate with gyms and men's barbershops to place trial packs and launch joint promotions to attract image-conscious male consumers. Organize flash mobs in shopping malls to allow consumers to experience the rollerball design, scan the code to follow the brand or buy the product to give away samples, leading to online conversions. Sponsor gaming tournaments, basketball games and other events with high male attention and set up brand booths to offer trials and discounts.

0 Marketing Loop

Attract users' attention through social media platforms (e.g. Tiktok, LittleRedBook) and guide them to e-commerce platforms (e.g. Tmall, Amazon) to purchase, and attach online and offline experience coupons to e-commerce orders to guide users to offline stores for experience. Offline activities further guide users to pay attention to the brand's social media and participate in interactions, and user-generated content and word-of-mouth communication feeds back to social media, attracting new users into the closed loop.
